

NEW JERSEY CELEBRATIONS

Patriotic Exercises, Parades and Fireworks Everywhere.

Every little town and village in New Jersey yesterday considered itself a part of the United States, and the small boy and the firecracker were inseparable. In some places grand displays were made, and at all the sea-side resorts the Fourth was observed in a more patriotic manner than ever before.

In Gloucester county the pretty little borough of Wenonah probably led in the celebration. A parade of the fantastic order in the morning, sports in the afternoon, fireworks in the evening, well interspersed with plenty of good music, were the features of the day. The Williamstown Lodge of Mystic Chain had charge of the day's celebration in that town. Those in attendance put in a full day, and when night came they felt they had done their duty in a patriotic way for one day. Down in Newfield the citizens celebrated the day in a general way by an old-fashioned picnic, ending with a display of fireworks.
